THE INDIAN WALK OF 1737.

On Saturday last a party of gentlemen interested in historical researches visited the place from which the famous walk with the Indians in 1737, by Marshall, Yeates and Jennings, had its starting point, on the Durham road, in Wrightstown, Penn. As to the exact point from which the walk began there has been some difference of tradition and onlying some and onlying some and bed taste in the mouth bilious attacks, paldifference of tradition and opinion, some au- ach, bad taste in the mouth, bilious attacks, pal thorities placing the location at the junction of the Durham and Pennsville roads, just above the meeting house; others at Ryan's corner, on the township line, half a mile below, and still others, who depend entirely upon hearsay, at the great chestnut tree by the roadside, a short distance east of the toll-gate.

The most authentic accounts are quite positive in fixing upon the first-named place.-Thomas Warner says that Edward Chapman told him that he had swung on the branches of the old chestnut tree at the northeast corner, when a boy, not less than one hundred years ago. Edward Chapman died in 1853, aged 92

Geo. Warner's belief, derived from the same source, is, that the tree stood on the opposite or southwest corner, but a few yards distant from the spot indicated by his brother Thomas. Beuj. Wiggins, who has given some attention to the subject, believes this cross roads to be the actual place of beginning. This belief is also confirmed by documentary evidence that admits of little doubt and is sustained by the verbal testimony of cotemporary witnesses.

A map made for the proprietaries, directly after the walk, and found among the Penn papers long afterward, makes the beginning of the walk at Ryan's corner and traces its entire course, but in this respect it is obviously erroneous. A copy of this map was shown to the company by Spencer Bonsall of Phila-

After looking over the vicinity and comparing notes, the visitors assembled in the Friends school house, which had been kindly opened for their use. Here a paper was read by William J. Buck, giving a description of the first trial walk made in 1735 by direction of Thomas Penn, for the purpose of marking out a road and seeing how much distance could be traversed in a day and a half. Every effort was made to keep this trial walk a secret from the Indians and others, and its very existence was unknown except to a few for a long time after ward. It is believed to have been made by Edward Marshall in May of 1735, just before an official council with the Indians at Pennsburg. The real walk, in September, 1737, began at the chestnut tree in Wrightstown at sunrise on the 19th, and ended at noon on the 20th at a point on the Lehigh, in the vicinity of Mauch Chunk. The entire distance travelled was a fraction of over

From this point the Iudians expected that a line would be drawn to the nearest place on the Delaware, near the Water Gap, but the white men, instead, made this line run at a right angle to the first course, striking the river many miles above the Lackawaxen. By this means the Indians were defrauded out of about one thousand two hundred square miles of land, and it was not long before hostilities broke out.

FALLS CHURCH. - A letter in the Washington Republican from Falls Church says:

"Our little village is growing beyond all expectation of the oldest inhabitants. Quite a number of houses are in course of erection. Messrs. Hollidge, Roberts, Fills, Wells, Dr. Lloyd, Forbes, Kinsley, Major Brown, Darling, Pogul, Hubbell, Crossman and others are erecting fine residences, while Mr. Geo. Mankin has just completed a large and commodious building for a store, and our genial post-master, Edward Birch, has just completed a large building to be used for store purposes and the postoffice.

"Jefferson Institute is destined to be one of the finest institutions of learning in this section, it not in the State. Accommodations for one hundred and fifty scholars are provided, with their teachers, and the prospect now is that we shall soon have to provide more room and employ more teachers.

"Thomas Jefferson described this locality as one of the healthiest in the United States, which, together with the fact that our citizens are strictly of a moral and religious class, makes it desirable for the citizens of Washington, Georgetown, Alexandria and the surrounding country to send their children here to be edu-

"Many of our citizens possess fine literary tastes, and for its development a course of Lome lectures has been established. The second entertainment of the series took place Wednesday evening. The beautiful audience room of the Presbyterian church was brilliantly lighted, and the exercises were opened by Messrs. Sargent and Brown and Misses Hogan and Sargent, who rendered the quartette, "Come, Holy Spirit," very finely, Mrs. C. H. Buxton was then introduced to the large and intelligent audience, who read Tennyson's "May Queen" with surprising rhetorical effect, which drew forth marked expression of joy, alternating with sorrow, as she carried her audience on, step by step, through this beautiful

"The lecturer of the evening was Dr. J. J. Moran. His subject was "Mental Culture," and the main portion of his discourse was directed to the young people of our community.'

A writer says: "The Spaniards have a mode of preserving which is quite peculiar to themselves. A slice being cut off from one end of a large melon, the seeds and soft parts of the fiesh are removed, and into the hollow thus formed a luscious heterogeneous crowd of apricots, nectarines and peaches, of oranges, both sweet and bitter, of slices of pineapples, of strawberries, of raspberries, is pressed and closely packed; then all is steeped in the pre-serving sprup, the slice is restored to the end of the melon, reunited by the stickiness of the sugar. How long it remains under treatment, how often the syrup may be made to simmer, are details unknown to us; what we do know is that the final result is altogether the supremest
